Eddy Grove Camp, Woodmen of the World, held memorial and unveiling ceremonies Sinday, the whole camp attending Sovereign Wood's church atten a. m., the pastor preaching a very able discourse to a house mhere standing room was at a preminun. At two o'clock p. m., the sovereigns met at their half and rehearsed the unveiling ritual, going at three to the cemetery where about 500 people were gathered. The unveiling ceremonies were carried out with ability, Sovereign Wood acting as master of ceremonies and the other camp officers led by Consul Commander, O'Quinn performing their parts well. The camp with visiting sovereigns and members of the Woodmen Circle lining up in wedge form on either side of the grave of James C. Cameron, who died a little over a year ago. After the unveiling Capt. Bujac delivered an oration the equal of which it is doubtful was ever made at Woodmen unveiling ceremonies. He referred to the deceased Sovereign Mr. Cameron whom all knew to be a poor and worthy man, a Scotchman from near the home of Burns, the immortal Scotch poet; he quoted that famous verse on death to show that even the grim reaper should not be held in such dread as is often the case. The lines he quoted are as follows:

O death! the poor man's dearest friend.
The kindest and the best!
Welcome the hour my aged limbs
Are laid with these at rest!
The great, the wealthy four thy bless.
From points and pleasure tori:
Itut, od a blest relief to those.
That weary-laden mourn!

The captain was followed by Rev. Joel Hedgpeth who recited an appropriate poem for the occasion. The music for the occasion was furnished by the following choir; Mr. and Mrs. Cushing, H. M. Chilcoat, V. L. Griffin and J. W. Gamel. Prof. Wells led the choir on his claronet, the music being one of the most pleasant features. After the unveiling of the fine monument over the grave of J. C. Mrs. Buford Polk and little Cameron, the sovereigns visited son and Miss Beulah Kellar, of the graves of James Carpenter, Queen, visited Mrs. W. W. Ward Stanley White and Hugh Freeand family from Saturday till man, literally covering all with flowers. After the decoration all returned to the hall where the circle ladies served refreshments.
